A BILL FOR A LAW TO A LAW TO PROVIDE FOR THE DIVISION OF FAMILY PROPERTY AND TO PROVIDE FOR INCIDENTAL AND CONNECTED PURPOSES

THE FAMILY PROPERTY (RIGHTS OF SPOUSES) BILL, 2018

MEMORANDUM OF OBJECTS AND REASONS

This Bill is one of three pieces of legislation recommended by the Law Reform Commission in its family law review. The Bill, among other things, seeks to modernize the principles upon which matrimonial or family property is divided upon the breakdown of a marriage or union. It deals with property rights of both married and certain unmarried spouses in the same way.

The Bill also seeks to regulate property rights of persons in common law unions, similar to countries such as Jamaica, Australia and New Zealand.

PART 1 - PRELIMINARY

Clause 1 of the Bill provides the short title and the commencement.

Clause 2 provides the interpretation provisions. Of note in clause 2 are definitions for “family home” and “spouse”. “Family home” is defined as the dwelling-house that is owned by either or both of the spouses and used habitually or from time to time by the spouses as the only or principal family residence together with any land, buildings or improvements appurtenant to such dwelling-house and used wholly or mainly for the purposes of the household.

In accordance with clause 2, “spouse” means -

- (a) a man who is married to a woman and vice versa; or
- (b) an unmarried man or unmarried woman who is in a de facto relationship with a person of the opposite sex for a period of not less than five years immediately preceding the institution of proceedings under this Law or the termination of cohabitation.

Clause 3 provides a definition for “de facto relationship”. It is provided that a person is in a de facto relationship with another person if -

- (a) the persons are not legally married to each other;
- (b) the persons are not related by family; and
- (c) having regard to all the circumstances of their relationship, they have a relationship as a couple living together on a genuine domestic basis.

The circumstances referred to above may include any or all of the following -

- (a) the duration of the relationship;
- (b) the nature and extent of their common residence;
- (c) whether a sexual relationship exists;

- (d) the degree of financial dependence or interdependence, and any arrangements for financial support, between them;
- (e) the ownership, use and acquisition of their property;
- (f) the degree of mutual commitment to a shared life;
- (g) the care and support of children; and
- (h) the reputation and public aspects of the relationship.

Clause 4 of the Bill deals with the application of the Law and provides that except as otherwise provided in this legislation and subject to subclauses (2) and (3) of clause 4 and section 7, the provisions of this legislation shall not apply after the death of either spouse and every enactment and rule of law or of equity shall continue to operate and apply in such case as if this Law had not been enacted.

Subclause (2) of clause 4 provides that the death of either spouse shall not affect the validity or effect of anything done or suffered in pursuance of the provisions of this legislation. Subclause (3) provides that if, while any proceedings under this legislation are pending one of the spouses dies, the proceedings may be continued and be completed; and any appeal may be heard and determined and the court may make such order as it thinks fit in the circumstances of the case as if the spouse had not died.

Clause 5 provides that except as otherwise expressly provided in this legislation, the provisions of this legislation shall have effect in place of the rules and presumptions of the common law and of equity to the extent that they apply to transactions between husband and wife in respect of property and, in cases for which provision is made by this legislation, between husband and wife, and each of them, and third parties.

Clause 6 deals with the jurisdiction of the courts under this legislation. It is provided that subject to clause 11, in any proceedings relating to family property instituted under this legislation, the parties to the proceedings may apply -

- (a) where the value of the property is fifty thousand dollars or less, to the summary court; or
- (b) in any other case, to the Grand Court.

PART 2 – FAMILY HOME

Clause 7 of the Bill deals with the entitlement to the family home -

- (a) on the grant of a decree of dissolution of a marriage or the termination of cohabitation;
- (b) on the grant of a decree of nullity of marriage; and
- (c) on the grant of a decree of judicial separation.

In such cases each spouse is, subject to clause 8 and 10 of the legislation, entitled to one-half share of the family home. Thus, the entitlement is not an absolute one and the court will have the power to vary such entitlement.

In accordance with clause 8 where in the circumstances of any particular case the court is of the opinion that it would be unreasonable or unjust for each spouse to be entitled to one-half of the family home, the court may, upon application by one of the spouses, make such order as it thinks reasonable taking into consideration such factors as the court thinks relevant including the following -

- (a) that the family home was inherited by one spouse;
- (b) that the family home was a gift to one spouse and the donor intended that spouse alone to benefit;
- (c) that the family home was already owned by one spouse at the time of the marriage or the beginning of cohabitation; and
- (d) that the marriage or the cohabitation is of short duration.

Clause 9 of the Bill deals with transactions to defeat claims to a family home. It is provided that where the title to a family home is in the name of one spouse only then, subject to the provisions of the legislation -

- (a) the other spouse may take such steps as may be necessary to protect his or her interest including the lodging of a caution pursuant to section 127 of the Registered Land Law (2004 Revision); and
- (b) any transaction concerning such home shall require the consent of both spouses.

The court may dispense with the consent of a spouse required by subclause (1)(b) if it is satisfied that consent cannot be obtained because the spouse is mentally incapacitated, the whereabouts of the spouse are unknown, consent is unreasonably withheld or for any other reason consent should be dispensed with.

In accordance with subclause (3), where one spouse enters into a transaction concerning the family home without the consent of the other spouse, then -

- (a) subject to paragraph (b), that transaction may be set aside by the court on an application by the other spouse if such consent had not been previously dispensed with by the court; and
- (b) paragraph (a) shall not apply in any case where an interest in the family home is acquired by a person as bona fide purchaser for value without notice of the other spouse's interest in the family home.

Where, by virtue of subclause (3)(b), a transaction cannot be set aside by the court, the spouse whose interest is defeated shall be entitled to claim, out of the proceeds of the transaction, the value of that spouse's share in the family home.

PART 3 – DIVISION OF PROPERTY

Clause 10 deals with pre-nuptial agreements which fall under two categories, marriage agreement and cohabitation agreements. The type of agreement depends on the nature of the relationship of the spouse i.e. whether married or about to marry or in a de facto relationship. Clause 10 provides that a marriage or cohabitation agreement may define the share of the property or any part thereof to which each spouse shall be entitled upon separation or dissolution of marriage and provides for the calculation of such share and the method by which property or part thereof may be divided. Every such agreement must be in writing signed by both parties whose signatures must be signed either by a justice of the peace, notary public or an attorney-at-law.

It is further proposed that an agreement under clause 10 will be unenforceable in any case where there is non-compliance with the formalities or the court is satisfied that it would be unjust to give effect to the agreement. An agreement made by a minor and every instrument executed by such minor for the purpose of giving effect to any such agreement shall be valid and effective as if the minor were of full age.

Under the draft legislation the court will have jurisdiction to enquire into any agreement made and may, in any proceedings under the legislation or on an application made for the purpose, declare that the agreement shall have effect in whole or in part or for any particular purpose if it is satisfied that the non-compliance mentioned in that subsection has not materially prejudiced the interests of a party to the marriage agreement. In deciding whether it would be unjust to give effect to an agreement under clause 10, the court must have regard to -

- (a) the provisions of the agreement;
- (b) the time that has elapsed since the agreement was made;
- (c) whether, in light of the circumstances existing at the time the agreement was made, the agreement is unfair or unreasonable;
- (d) whether any changes in circumstances since the agreement was made (whether or not such changes were contemplated by the parties) render the agreement unfair or unreasonable; or
- (e) any other matter which it considers relevant to any proceedings.

Any property to which an agreement does not apply will be subject to the other provisions of the legislation relating to the determination of financial matters by the court. It is proposed that parties to an agreement or an amendment of such agreement may register such agreement or amendment thereto with the Clerk of the Court.

Under the Bill the court may also declare interests in property during the subsistence of a marriage or union. Clause 11 provides that where during the subsistence of a marriage or cohabitation, any question arises between the spouses as to the title to or possession of property, either party or any bank, corporation, company, public body or society in which either of the spouses has any stocks, funds or shares may apply by summons or otherwise in a summary way to the Grand Court or, at the option of the applicant irrespective of the value of the property in dispute, to the summary court for a determination of such question.

Clause 12 sets out how property to which an application relates should be evaluated. Subject to the contrary in a marriage or cohabitation agreement and the rights of creditors, the value of property to which an application under the legislation relates shall be its value at the date of the hearing of the matter unless the court otherwise decides. A spouse's share in property shall be determined as at the date on which the spouses ceased to live together as man and wife or to cohabit or if they have not so ceased, at the date of the application to the court.

Clause 13 sets out when an application may be made to the court for a division of property. Such times include on the application for a grant of a dissolution of marriage or termination of cohabitation or where one spouse is endangering the property or seriously diminishing its value, by gross mismanagement or by wilful or reckless dissipation of property or earnings.

The Bill in clause 14 sets out the matters which must be considered by the court when considering an application for division of property. Such matters include the following -

- (a) the contribution made directly or indirectly to the acquisition, conservation or improvement of the property by either spouse, including any contribution made in the capacity of homemaker or parent;
- (b) that there is no family home;
- (c) the age of each spouse and the duration of the marriage or the period of cohabitation;
- (d) that there is an agreement with respect to the ownership and division of property;
- (e) the contributions which each of the spouses has made or is likely in the foreseeable future to make to the welfare of the family, including any contribution made in the capacity of homemaker or parent;

- (f) the effect of any proposed order upon the earning capacity of either spouse;
- (g) the standard of living enjoyed by the family before the breakdown of the marriage or the relationship;
- (h) any order that has been made under the legislation in respect of a spouse; or
- (i) such other fact or circumstance which, in the opinion of the court the justice of the case requires to be taken into account.

A contribution is not only a monetary one and clause 14 of the Bill affirms the fact that there shall be no presumption that a monetary contribution is of greater value than a non-monetary contribution. Such contribution may include-

- (a) the care of any relevant child or any aged or infirm relative or dependant of a spouse;
- (b) the giving of assistance or support by one spouse to the other, whether or not of a material kind, including the giving of assistance or support which -
 - (i) enables the other spouse to acquire qualifications; or
 - (ii) aids the other spouse in the carrying on of that spouse's occupation or business;
- (c) the management of the household and the performance of household duties;
- (d) the payment of money to maintain or increase the value of the property or any part thereof;
- (e) the performance of work or services in respect of the property or part thereof; or
- (f) the provision of money, including the earning of income for the purposes of the marriage or cohabitation.

Under clause 15 the court is empowered to alter the interest of either spouse in property and may, for example, make an order requiring either or both spouses to make, for the benefit of either or both spouses, such settlement or transfer of property as the court determines.

Under clause 16 the court is empowered to set aside an order made under clause 15 if, for example, evidence is provided that the order was obtained by fraud, duress or false evidence.

The Bill seeks to provide protection to creditors and third parties and, in accordance with clause 17, it is provided that secured and unsecured creditors of a spouse shall have the same rights against that spouse as if the legislation had not been enacted. Further, property which, if the legislation were not enacted would have been administered under the Bankruptcy Law (1997 Revision) by the Trustee in Bankruptcy on the bankruptcy of a spouse, shall be so administered.

Each spouse will have a protected interest in respect of one-half share of the family home but on the bankruptcy of a spouse the Trustee in Bankruptcy shall pay to the other spouse such amount in satisfaction of the protected interest of that spouse as the court, on application of the Trustee in Bankruptcy, or that spouse, may direct. The value of property that may be divided between the spouses shall be ascertained by deducting from the value of property owned by each spouse -

- (a) any secured or unsecured debts (other than personal debts or debts secured wholly by property) owed by one spouse; and
- (b) the unsecured personal debts owed by one spouse to the extent that such debts exceed the value of any property of that spouse.

It is further provided under clause 18 that, subject to the legislation, the rights conferred on any spouse by an order made under the legislation shall be subject to the rights of any person entitled to the benefit of any security, charge or encumbrance affecting any property in respect of which the order is made if such security, charge or encumbrance was registered before the order was made or if the rights of that person arose under an instrument executed before the date of the making of the order. However, no money payable under any security, charge or encumbrance shall be called in or become due by reason of the making of an order under the legislation, not being an order directing the sale of any property.

Clause 19 makes void any transaction, etc. between spouses with respect to their family home or other property which is intended to defeat any creditor of either spouse.

Clause 20 makes it an offence for any person, without the leave of the court, to sell or otherwise dispose of property the subject of proceedings under the legislation.

Clause 21 provides that where the court is satisfied that a person is about to dispose of property, whether for value or not, by or on behalf of or by direction of or in the interest of any person in order to defeat the claim or rights of any other person under this Law, then, on the application of that other person and on such notice being given as the court may direct, the court may -

- (a) by order restrain the making of the disposition; or
- (b) order that any proceeds, which, at the time of the hearing of the application may have been paid in respect of the disposition, be paid into Court to be dealt with as the court directs.

Clause 22 provides that, in respect of property to which clause 21 relates, the court may, among other things, on application by a relevant person, order the transfer of that property to another person.

PART 4 – POWER OF COURT TO MAKE OTHER ORDERS

Clause 23 provides a list of the types of orders which the court is empowered to make under the legislation.

PART 5- GENERAL

Clause 24 repeals section 13 of the Married Women's Property Law (1997 Revision). Section 13 of that Law provides that questions relating to property division between husband and wife are to be determined by the summary court.

Clause 25 contains transitional provisions.
